A Plain President.

A Pinth President.

From the boston Journal.

We doubt if the White House ever had au occupant who, in his leading traits and habits, more truly represented the great mass of people than President Grant. Instead of exhibiting the formation and prejudices of the army, as many had predicted, or, still less, the characteristics of a lover of horses and high living, as others had charged. President Grant has shown himself to be a plain, accessible, modest, nothodical man of business, who aims to do his duty in the most quiet way possible. He has about him no hangerson, no favored cliques, no kitchen cabinets. No lobbyists have the run of the Eccoutive manison, or boast of their influence at headquarters. Whatever citizen has business with the Chief Magistrate, has an oven chance of approaching him during business hours, and of having his widness respectfully listened to. He will not run the gauntite of files of superceitious attendants, or be whiteled through the mhres of circumlocation office. He will come direct to a plain man, and will get direct answers to every proper question he puts.

As to the management of his time, President Grant consults his own judgment, instead of his thousand and one advisers. As he travelled to suit himself during vacation, so he aphave any more in mine; they are very unplea-sant, and the untelepations of what the next second may bring forth are by no means plea-sant or inspiring. This morning at 2 o'cleck there was three distinct vibrations, but they were not violent enough to cause much com-motion, though it is said that Hornblower, the proprietor of the Orleans, who is not afraid of them (ch. no, it is Mrs. Maloney.) was seen making tracks for the front door. To-day everything is lovely, and people talk of the latest sensation with that patronizing air that is so refreshing to behold.

As he trave to have arranged his daily habits a ington with a like independence. After morning walk by himself, he is ready in office work at nine o'clock, continuing here. By four o'clock, at the latest, all shave retired, and the White House is osed for the day. After dinner the Predrives his family out dent curves as a many our, insect, and, anuch as has been said of his nondress for horses, his equipage is among the cost modest in Washington. Haring much immunication to comparison were not been precised in the control of t singular sight to see the old man as he was on the point of starting out in the fall to his winter quarters. With his uncouth looking little mule laden with traps, kettles, cooking utensils and other camping apparatus, until scarcely any mule but ears was visible, followed by the old pointer dog, Moses, in single file, this strange relime would take up the line of march, to be seen no more until the nelting of the snows in the spring. In the early part of the present winter the apot selected by the old trapper for his winter subode was on the border of a small stream known as Trade river, a tributary of the Uppen St. Grox, and it proved "the last earthly labitation" he would ever require. Recently an exploring party in that vieinity were attracted to the luth by the sound, their steps were directed to the little cabin, where a strange, sad sight met their gaze. Near the cuttaines stood a diminutive mule, nearly dead with hunger. Beside him sat the dog, who, on the diproach of the men, an into the cabin as though to apprise his master that help was near. But no certhly assistance could avail his master. Sitting in a corner, rigid in death, was poor old Victor; he had evidently died very suddenly, as in his right hand he held a large clasp-knife, while across his knees partially finished lay a gui rod. If is gun, with the ranned broken, stood near linin; at his feet hay a trup with an oter held river, many miles from the exetting seemed of his early life. The two faithful companions who shared his wanderings are properly cared for, and many of those who in times past have listened to the old man as he grew eloquent when recounting his past history, will learn with regret the sad termination of the lonely life of "Old Moscow, the trapper."

The Church again claims recognition as a distinct power, demunds the exclusion of the Biblic form our common schools, and that a goodly share of the school money shall be set aside for the use of the sectarina schools, in which children are instructed as mouhers of the Catholic Church. The liberal and tolenart spirit of our people would probably lead them to yield their midoubled rights as a majority, to retain the reading of the Bible in the public schools, if they were sure the struggle would end there. But, already, in Concinnati, those Catholics who look upon the battle as won, show their insincerity by declaring that they do not wish their children to attend schools where a wholook upon the battle as won, show their insincerity by declaring that they do not wish their children to attend schools where a religious principles are inculeated, and that they must now have their own church-schools supported from the public fund.

In San Francisco they have gone further, and in the Tenth street public school, the Catholic members of the Board of Education have caused the catechism of the Rounish Church to the taight of the pupils. Protestant as well as Catholic, at first, after school hours, and theaduring school hours. In this city, besides the various munificent donations annually made to the different Catholic institutions by the city government, we find that under a new section of the tax levy, out of a sum of $215,000, appropriated "for the support of schools educating children gratuitously in said city," $160,000—nearly three-quarters of the whole-was paid in 1890 to Roman Catholic church schools.—Nen York Table Talk.
